Genealogy Research with member Risa Heywood

Why you should start researching your family history today... and how to begin ?

If you have considered researching your family history but don't know how to start, then join us for this short talk. You'll learn why it's important to begin as soon as possible, five important rules for new genealogists and why being a European expat can be a great advantage. You'll also leave with a list of resources to help you get started.

Risa Heywood is a cross-cultural trainer and professional genealogist. She has been doing family history research since 1990 when she inherited a piece of wrapping paper on which was drawn an unfinished family tree. Risa loves solving genealogy puzzles and helping her clients discover more about their immigrant ancestors. She has also traveled with researchers to Belarus, Hungary and Slovakia to help them walk in the footsteps of their families. Risa is from the US and prior to moving to Germany in April, 2016, she and her husband were on an expat assignment in Singapore.
